H. W. SCHEER,
Manager of the Gazette.

Admiral De Lesseps has received a set back to his Panama canal project by the failure of the French ministry to give him the authority to issue a lottery loan to aid the construction of the canal.

Peace is far from being assured in European circles. The German reichstag has recently passed a bill increasing the landwehr to the extent of several hundred thousand men. Russia is adding largely to its armed forces. Italy and France are strengthening their land and naval forces, and Austria is putting improved weapons into the hands of its soldiers.

Senator W. E. Chandler, of New Hampshire, aspires to the chairmanship of the republican national committee and ex-Senator T. C. Platt, of New York, wants to be chairman of the executive committee. It would be hard to find two men more expert in political "tricks" and "dodges." Each has methods of conducting political campaigns peculiarly his own.

The action of a minister's association in Baltimore in condemning the president for sending a gift to the pope on the occasion of his jubilee anniversary savors strongly of bigotry. President Cleveland did nothing more than follow the example of the rulers of nearly all the civilized countries, and his action was particularly complimentary to ten millions of American Catholic citizens.

Justice, though sometimes tardy, generally accomplishes its aims in the end. A notable instance of this is the decision of the United States supreme court in the Utah Maxwell murder case, which has been before the public for a long time. The crime for which he was convicted was a most brutal one, and his ability, of evading the penalty for its commission lay in a supposed legal technicality.

The tariff question seems to have thrown all other national questions into the shade. But notwithstanding the federal democratic office holders have begun to take an active part in the organization of state and campaign committees. The time has about arrived when republicans can demonstrate the insincerity of democratic professions on civil service reform to good advantage and with an abundance of illustrations.

The breach between Mr. Randall and the administration is daily widening and it would not be surprising if that gentleman should take a position of open hostility to the president. Mr. Cleveland will miss the cool judgment and political foresight of Mr. Manning in handling the affairs of his party. It is very doubtful if the Pennsylvania statesman would have been opposed had he been alive. Mr. Randall, by his speeches in 1884, did much to secure Mr. Cleveland's election. Evidently the president has come to the conclusion that his support is not necessary to his success, or else has abandoned any idea of carrying the eastern states on the tariff issue.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat is not very sanguine over the prospect of more intimate commercial relations with Mexico than those which have hitherto prevailed. It says:

General Bragg is said to be confident that he can bring about such an improvement in our relations with Mexico as will give us a controlling share of her foreign commerce. It is to be hoped, of course, that he will be able to effect such a result; but the probabilities are manifestly against it. As Hon. C. Beltran remarked a good many years ago, the choice is like an irresistible one: we don't take wine to Europe, and there is a strong reason to believe that we have forfeited the opportunity in Mexico. The new line which that country has just opened in Germany is decidedly to our disadvantage, and will be very likely to give to another nation the profits which we might have secured by pursuing a more liberal and intelligent policy.

The national board of trade on September the question of celebrating the one hundredth anniversary of the inauguration of the present government under the constitution, in 1889, and also the world's exposition in 1892, in honor of the four hundredth anniversary of the discovery of America by Columbus. The movement for the celebrations has been endorsed during the past two years by several national organizations like the national grange, the national board of trade, American Bankers' association, and the national school congress. Two bills have been introduced in congress providing for the celebrations. The bill providing for the constitutional celebration appropriates three hundred thousand dollars to pay the expenses and invites the people of Spanish America to participate with us in the celebration, which is to be held in Washington, D. C. The final celebration of the discovery of the great continent of America is to be held in the city of New York, and is to be under the auspices of the general government. The plan of the celebrations is to be carried out by a commission of one hundred persons, who are to be appointed by the president, three by the president of the senate and three by the speaker of the house. The progress of this celebration needs no elaboration. Aside from the fact that all previous centennial celebrations, which have been in progress since the fifth of April, 1875, when the anniversaries of the battles of Concord and Lexington were observed, have done a great deal to stir Americans to patriotism and to awaken interest in American history, it will be of especial importance that the celebration of the discovery of America by Columbus should be made a notable event in the history of the country. One of the principal features of the Centennial celebration of the adoption of the constitution will be the presentation to the city of New York by the several states of the union of a statue of George Washington, to be placed in front of the building in which the first congress under the constitution assembled. The statue of Washington which now stands in front of the sub-treasury building on Wall street, New York, was presented by the state of New York, and the statue of Washington which now stands in front of the city hall in Philadelphia was presented by the state of Pennsylvania. AUSTRIAN FIGHTING MEN.

Men Who Will Be at the Front If There Is a European War.

In view of the [illegible] European war, in which Austria will play a large part, it will be of interest to read a description of the men in whose hands Austria's fate will be placed. Austria has been a powerful factor in the affairs of her neighbors. One of her [illegible] Charles Albert's Duke Albrecht, served the emperor in military capacity for more than sixty years, a fact which, I suppose, was celebrated by a jubilee in the Albrechtsburg, the residence of Albert, and received his military education under the supervision of his uncle Albrecht. At the age of 14 he entered the army, in which he rose from rank to rank. As early as 1845 he was a [illegible] general. He has taken an important part in many engagements, as, for instance, in the battles of Montana and Novara, where he acted as chief of the victory for the Austrians and the chief victory of his life, however, was that of Custozza in 1866, when he signally defeated the Italians. The reader will remember that Austria at that time was compelled to fight two enemies at once, the Prussians in the north and the Italians in the south. While at Custozza over the latter, Austria, owing to the incompetence of her generals, was victorious only by her northern foe. But not only in the battle field has Duke Albrecht acquired renown and distinction, he is now the good tactician of the Austrian army, which, though has various and vigorous, has now reached a state of great efficiency. Duke Albrecht is Austria's field marshal, [illegible] to the age of 70. Moltke in the German army. He is also known as an able writer on military topics.

A telegram was received in this city from Cripple Creek yesterday afternoon announcing the death of Mrs. Dr. Bell, wife of Dr. Bell of this city. The deceased lady had been ill for some time and her death was not unexpected. The remains will be brought to this city for interment.

The demand for the coal in Leadville is quite large, and the company is hard put to supply the orders that are coming in. Arrangements are being made whereby the company will be enabled to keep a supply on hand at all times.

Last evening City Marshal Duncan and Deputy Sheriff Jones arrested the proprietor of a certain portion of the city, and after locking up the establishment and putting the key in their pockets, left the place. Before leaving, however, they informed the proprietor that they would be on hand early in the morning to open up for business.

Judge Bell returned to the city on the 5:30 train yesterday afternoon from Leadville, where he has been for the past few weeks. Judge Bell has been very successful in his practice in Leadville, and has made many friends during his stay there. He has returned to this city to remain permanently.

The City Water Company has commenced to work to secure the additional supply of water for the city. From a statement in the Denver Times, it is learned that the water company has secured the right of way for the Denver, Texas & Ft. Worth railroad, which was recently forfeited, and will commence work at once. The company will lay a flowing main from the Cheyenne canon to the Colorado street crossing. On account of the cost of the work, it will be impossible to complete the main before the opening of the railroad next spring.

A prominent resident of the county was asked a few days ago what was the probable effect of a drought next season upon the settlers who have recently taken up claims in the eastern portion of the county. He replied that it would not cause them to starve and neither claim. That these settlers were people who were contented with comparatively little, and only desired to make a comfortable living. That this section of the county would never be an agricultural region, but that potatoes could be grown there without the means of irrigation. As long as this vegetable could be raised, so long would the land be occupied by small settlers. He considered the matter of a drought to be out of the question but thought in the event of its taking place that the number of actual settlers would be to the wise [illegible]
